KeyLocker Description: KeyLocker is a new and modern self-contained, multi-platform anti-theft software that can be used to lock a bootable USB drive. All this using only a standard ISO file. A BIOS update may be required if you are using a motherboard with Intel ME. KeyLocker is also able to hide a locked USB drive, making it almost impossible for anyone but the owner to access the data.

KeyLocker is not a disk encryption software, because it does not have any encryption software included, but, after installation, the USB drive becomes encrypted. The rest of the drive is visible from the Windows Disk

Manager and from other programs like Device Manager. Supported platforms:

- Windows 10 and Windows 7/8/8.1
- Linux
- Macintosh

KeyLocker supports both FAT32 and NTFS file systems. By default, the program creates a secure file system (FAT32), but you can choose between NTFS and FAT32 to make it compatible with removable drives that were encrypted in the past.

Features:

- Easy and fast to use. No setup needed.
- Runs in the background without slowing down the computer.
- Use an ISO file to create a bootable USB drive.
- A multi-platform anti-theft software, works on all Windows and Linux platforms.
- Works with all types of removable drives.
- Enables you to lock the USB drive to prevent the data on it from being accessed.
- The USB drive will be visible by 81e310abbf

Convert Email Addresses To Images

Software is a lightweight utility that provides a simple solution to this issue, as it allows you to create JPG or PNG image files that contain one or more addresses and can be safely published online. Easy-to-use conversion tool that supports batch processing This application is well suited for users who need to publish a large list of e-mail addresses, as it is capable of converting the entire contents of a TXT file in one operation. Of course, you can also add addresses manually, should you wish to complete the existing list. However, while the program offers support for drag and drop, documents that are loaded in this fashion cannot be processed. The email list can be exported to a single JPG or PNG image, but you also have the option of saving each address to a separate file. Useful tool for those who wish to display e-mail addresses on their websites Once the imported addresses have been converted, you can take the output image files and publish them on your website without having to worry about their contents being stolen. Naturally, anyone can still copy the e-mails manually, but they will be safe from regular harvesting bots. Outdated user interface that could use some improvements
