Try Daisy Weddings Widget Today and See The Great Fun that it Can Bring to Your Website! On June 22, 2009, my hubby was assigned a case number to a child custody case that has been ongoing for a couple of years. It's kind of like being a character in a soap opera. We'll call him G. G has some emotional difficulties, so he is required to see several therapists and psychologists. Every visit, G needs to be accompanied by his parent or guardian. It could be either the mother or father, either way, I think it's the same for the kids anyway. So G has to be accompanied by one of his parents. If he is accompanied by the mother, she could be working, she could be at home with her husband, she could be in school, etc. When the father is taking G, it is to the therapy offices. Saturdays are the worst. We are supposed to be out of the house by 10:00 am. While we are going to the doctor's office, there is an office that is supposed to see us and can pick us up from our house. Unfortunately, the office is scheduled to get off at 11:00 am, which is just enough time for us to get to the office and have the appointment. There are times that the office gets a case cancellation or we miss them and have to wait a couple of hours before they can see us. In the morning, G and I have to pick each other up from school, then we get into our respective cars and go to our respective therapy offices. Once we get to the therapy office, we go inside and wait to see if there are any cancellations.

Once it is our turn to see the therapist or psychologist, we go back to the waiting area, wait a

Celebrating the beginning of a new relationship between two loving hearts is quite a special event. One can be so happy with the fact that they have found a good partner. I for one, have enjoyed my freedom for the last few years and have met some good people, but have yet to make a commitment that I know I can be happy in for the rest of my life. I now see that I have a bit of waiting to do, but I have decided to do my best to hold on to every moment of my freedom that I still have left. I realize that I must now make plans for my future and what it will hold for me. I can see that we have a fair number of weeks to go before we are ready for the big day. I know that I must make the right decision that will lead to lasting love. The long hours of contemplation I have been trying to determine the decision I must make, has made me realize that I have no idea what to expect on the day of my wedding. Will I get to do the ceremony that I have been dreaming about for the last several years? The answer is no. The one thing I do know is that I want to be with the man that I love, and I want to have a wedding that is the most special to me that I will ever have. When I set out to write this article I had a few goals in mind. I wanted to share the things I have learned and want to know. I also wanted to share some of the issues that I have found myself dealing with in my own personal wedding planning process. I wanted to help the newly engaged who are worried about what they are going to do, and what they can do to make the day easier on themselves and others. It seems like there is a million things to do. I feel like I have enough problems as it is. How can I ask a bride and groom to make my wedding planning life easier for me when I can't even plan my own wedding myself? I've learned that the more prepared and planned out I am, the more stress I end up having. The little things go by so fast when you are not prepared to deal with them. The big day will come and I hope that I am
