Johor Corporation Optionbot SP500 References Category:Electronic trading systems Category:NinjaTraderQ: Can np.save and np.load be applied to numpy.array()? The np.load function seems to have an argument format. I am currently converting an array to a numpy.array after initializing it with another method. I am finding that this creates a lot of empty space in the returned array. Is it possible to apply the function to a numpy.array() to reduce the size of the array? A: Use asarray to convert an array into a numpy array, see: numpy.asarray() Return an array that represents the given array object. This may be an exact copy, it is recommended to use 'copy=' if you want to avoid this. When you use the load function, it returns a bytes object. You can convert that bytes object to a string with str(). The documentation tells you that you can do: data = np.load('file_name.npy', allow_pickle=True) To allow the pickle protocol to pickle the ndarray without the extra space. Relationships among clinical activities of team care in an acute care setting. The purpose of this study was to examine the congruence between conceptualizations of team care and the interrelationships of team activities that characterize the provision of patient care within the context of one large U.S. hospital. A total of 1,105 consecutive patients were interviewed in two, four-bed intensive care units (ICUs) on five consecutive days within the
