

The site is located in Germany, so I don't want to use one of the RAR files as this would be a little misleading. Here is a screenshot of the.scr file on my PC: Here is a screenshot of the.scr file on the other PC: The other PC works fine, so this is more of a problem of their own software. (you can see the 007 desktop, as I just started the PC using that desktop) EDIT: I've tried this again later, and it still won't work. I have Windows 10 and CrossOver. A: The file has a complex filename, consisting of the name of the operating system, followed by something like 47.x.b.50.b.54.y. So it'll only be successfully used if you first run the CD-ROM in Windows 7. See for a workaround. You can change the last folder to %PCName%\Users\YourName to let Windows use your user's PCName folder instead, but note that any files you put in there (including your own settings.xml) won't be automatically used by the CrossOver installation. I'd suggest you use the Windows option to eject the CD-ROM disc, and put it back in again using the more convenient disc folder. A: Just press Win+R and type regedit from there you can change file key values from that editor. If you are not comfortable with the registry editing then you can get any other registry editor and open that file instead. That is how it was done in the past where the user would have a choice of registry editor like in this answer. Q: How to delete an object when it's in state with Array in React? I'm facing a problem here. I have a list of items. One of the items is deleted by using the button. When I click the button to delete the item, the state of the data changes. But when I try to delete the item that was deleted, it doesn't want to delete. Here's a gif of what happens The code import React, { useState } from 'react'; import Item from
