Wine Types List - By John Gilmour The following list of wine types is in alphabetical order. There are two kinds of winemaking: harvesting by hand and mechanical harvesters. Mechanical harvesters are equipment that take over the harvesting function. Some country wine regions are mainly working-class areas with a high concentration of wine production. The wines from these regions are cheaper and usually fruitier and lighter-bodied than more attractive wine produced in other wine regions. The two main French wine regions are Bordeaux and Burgundy, where the most famous wines are made from Cabernet Sauvignon, Pinot Noir and Chardonnay grapes. The main German wine regions are Mosel and Pfalz, which are famous for their Riesling grapes. The main wine regions in the UK are Somerset, Devon, Oxfordshire, Gloucestershire, Hampshire, Dorset, East Yorkshire, Kent, Gloucester, the New Forest, and Devon. The main Italian wine regions are Piedmont, Valle d'Aosta, and Veneto, where the best wines are made from Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Nebbiolo grapes. The main Spanish wine regions are Andalucia, Rioja and Jerez, where the main grapes are Tempranillo, Garnacha and Albariño. Other wines from the UK, France, Italy and Spain can be classified as a "fine wine" or "superior wine". They are more expensive and have a long wine list that indicates the producer's reputation. There are many styles of wines, depending on the grape used and the country where they are grown.

Q: HashSet and ConcurrentHashSet behavior I'm a little confused on how a HashSet behaves with respect to other Set implementations. I have a HashSet called tmp, and a ConcurrentHashSet called remainingKeys. I have a function that can add and remove elements from tmp or remainingKeys, and I'd like to insert all elements that are in tmp. This is what I'm doing right now:

public void
addAllElementsInHashSet(HashSet tmp) { ConcurrentHashSet remainingKeys = new ConcurrentHashSet(); for(String k : tmp) {
