Andrew Cuomo, as law enforcement has launched a raid on his state residence in response to the growing corruption allegations. Police, under the authority of the New York attorney general, issued a search warrant on Thursday morning in relation to a Long Island City apartment reportedly held by Cuomo's brother, convicted felon and former Assembly Speaker Carl McCall, who has also been implicated in a similar probe. "Police executed a search warrant today at an apartment building at 1075 2nd Avenue in Long Island City," said department spokesman Stephen Davis. "The execution was in response to an investigation into possible corruption or criminal violations of state law." "We have no knowledge of what the search warrant is for, but we have already been advised that it is related to an investigation of Cuomo's former aides," a source told the Daily News. "We have no further comment." BREAKING: #Cuomo NY#SUNY Binghamton Police searching the Governor's brother's Long Island City apartment after receiving a search warrant for possible corruption or criminal violation of state law. — Muriel Kane (@Muriel_Kane) April 3, 2019 Shortly before the news broke, Cuomo had blasted the raid, which he called "political retaliation" against him and his allies. "The only place where a raid can occur is in the state of New York," Cuomo said Thursday at a Long Island press conference. "And yet, another political hit job in the middle of the night," " d0c515b9f4

The purpose of this program is to train a new generation of physician-scientists in basic, translational and clinical research. The goal of this program is to promote the careers of highly trained physician-scientists who can pursue individual research programs and develop into independent investigators. This training program focuses on basic, translational and clinical research that can lead to the advancement of promising new strategies to prevent, detect, diagnose, and treat human disease. Research themes include: 1) diabetes mellitus, 2) cardiovascular disease, 3) obesity and nutrition, 4) cancer, 5) infectious diseases, and 6) neurobiology and behavior. Complementary elements include didactic training of the trainees in scientific, mathematical, career, and ethical issues. The trainees are encouraged to work with faculty of the UT Southwestern Medical Center (UTSW), but with also have the option of working at other research institutions in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex such as the Baylor College of Medicine, the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center, the University of Texas Health Science Center, and the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas. These other institutions also provide outstanding research programs with ample research funds available. The program has been restructured in the last funding period to include 2 new training tracks that will better attract diverse candidates and provide multiple options. These 2 tracks are: 1) diabetes, obesity and nutrition and 2) inflammation and pain. Finally, this program has been strengthened and expanded through additional recruitment of new faculty. PUBLIC HEALTH RELEVANCE: The training program described here is designed to attract and train physician-scientists who will focus on basic, translational and clinical research that can lead to advances in prevention, detection, diagnosis, and treatment of human disease. This training program will provide promising trainees with a core of didactic training that will promote their success as independent investigators. "My sister was right." "Wait..."
